Literacy:

Writing

We are currently starting our next writing unit: procedural writing. Students have written a piece on 'How To Make Fairy Bread' during their cold write (pre-unit writing) for us to see their level of understanding around procedural writing.

Next week students will be learning about specific language that we need to use to ensure steps are undertaken correctly. We will also be introducing the structure of a procedural text type.

Reading

Students have learnt how to identify the main idea and supporting details from a non-fiction text. They are also applying their knowledge of key features of non-fiction texts though identifying and outlining the purpose of the text feature in the text they read.

Maths:

We have been learning subtraction through a range of strategies including: using fingers, number sentences, compensation, number line, adjusting numbers and many more!

Students have been working at their point of need during this unit. With some students working on missing number sentences, worded problems, subtraction facts up to 20, subtracting two two-digit, three digit and even four digit numbers!

As of next week, we will be starting our Data and Representation unit.
